HONGSONG, APRIL 23rd, 1:27. DR. MACGOWAN'S interesting paper on Chiness Guilds, published in the Journal of the China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, and from which we published some extracts a day or two ago, throws a flood of light on a subject of very great importance. MACGOWAN quotes Consul GILES's remark that "Foreign merchants regard them [the guilds] with a certain amount of awe, for they are often made to feel keenly enough the influence which those institutions exert over every branch of trade." The learned author himself, however, has formed rather a favourable opinion of the guilds, and says. that " when foreign merchants come to understand these institutions better they will discover that but for them the course of true commerce would not run as smoothly as it now does." In the short discussion which followed the reading of the paper at the meeting of the Society Mr. Kingsmill -to the absence of a civil code in China, and that it was the same in Europe from the 11th to the 15th century, when there was criminal jurisprudence but no civil law, The same idea was worked out more fully by the Rev. E. Finer, who said:-"The reason why the Chinese succeed so well with their guilds and other associations, when Europeans often fail with theirs, in on account of the peculiar nature of the law in giment, their regimental band will play in the in the city of Victoria?" Still it is an Ordinance which received very great consideration from the Commission and which took us a great deal of time, and I think the wording and details of the Ordinance have been very much improved. It repeals in full Ordinances 11 of 1864, 8 of 1872, and 24 of 1882, and also sections of Ordinances 7 of 1868 and 3 of 1865. The first addition which I shall allude to is contained in clause 5. In the matter of exemptions we have exempted solicitor's clerks, and in subsection f editors of newspapers in the colony and their staff. When I arrived in the colony I found there were very few exemptions indeed according to the Ordinance, and when I came to draw up the first jury list as Registrar I thought it my duty to include all those not exempted, and I came in for a certain amount of criticism for this unnecessary innovation, but I thought myself perfectly justified in doing it as I only acted according to the strict letter of the law, and I included editors and their staff. They were exempted by the Legislative Connoil under another section altogether and they have not been put on since. But as I was introducing a new Ordinance and thought they could to be exempted I thought the proper way of doing so was by making an express exemption in their favour, and this proposal of mine was received by the Law Commission. Now, instead of being dependent on the Legislative Council, which might or might not exempt them, they will be label. Sold wholesale by the ference to a guild. Dr. Maccowan assures | swords of Japan. It now reads "Clergymen of the Church of England, Roman Catholic Priests, and Ministers of any congregation of Protestant Dissenters or of Jews: provided they follow no secular occupation except that of Schoolmasters." Section 6 is new. It provides that exemption or want of qualification shall be no ground for impeaching the verdict of a jury. Another change is made in section 11. At present when special jurors are summoned, twelve are summond, and out of these twelve only seven serve on the jury It has been the custom to take the whole of these twelve names and place them in the ballot box, so that they are not called on again until the other names have been exhausted. It is now proposed to make the five who have not served liable to be called upon again. At present they are exempted drift-against-the-edge. The fact is the Japanese for the whole year, merely for having been sumunderstand the tempering of sword blades better | mened. Now, they will only be exempted if they have been summoned and have served on a jury. The greater part of Section 13 is new. It relates to the proceedings to be taken for settling and striking a special jury. This pratice has always been followed, but there has been no positive enactment for it. This now settles the pratice and it will be followed in future. Section 14 is new. It states "In forming any panel the Registrar shall pass over the names of all persons who are dead or absent from the Colony, but shall return to the Special Jurers Ballot Box or Common Jurors Ballet Box (as the case may require) the names of any temporary absentees, which may be drawn." This is, I may merely sanctioning what has the pratice, although no law was pro-

If any one is temporarily absent his pame is put back in the Council was held yesterday afternoon - There box. This has been found very convenient. In Section 17, there is rather an important difference. By Ordinance 8 of 1872, which relates to special juries, a special jury can only be summoned on the application of the Attorney Generator by order of the judge on the application of a prisoner. Therefore a private prosecutor was unable to obtain a special jury, unless he could satisfy the Attorney-General it was a case in which a special jury should be had. I propose in this section to add "Or upon the application of any private presecutor." Section 21 is entirely new—"Whenever the jury in a criminal-case shall not be unanimous in their verdict, it shall be lawful for the Judge to direct them to withdraw from the Court Room for the purpose of considering their verdict in private." think that some verdicts have lately been arrived at which perhaps, would not have been given had the jury been able to retire and consider their verdict. The jury box is certainly not a very earliest. Taking all the circumstances into conconvenient place for them to discuss their verdict, when they are not unanimous, and it has been thought expedient to give power to the judge, as soon as he sees they are not unanimous, to direct them to retire. In section 22, there are some additions. "In the event of any of the jurors dissenting from the residue, the jury shall retire to consider their verdict and after reasonable consultation the verdict of a majority shall be held and deemed to all intents and purposes Registrar General now states that the present accom. to be the verdict of the jury." THE HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANK The Bill entitled "An Ordinance authorising the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation to continue incorporated for the further term of twenty-one years," was considered in Committee and reported without amendment.

The Council went into Committee on a Bill entitled "An Ordinance empowering the Courts to award whipping as a further punishment for certain crimes." The ACTING ATTORNEY GENERAL said that sub-section a of the first section anthorized the court to punish with whipping an offender convicted of any felony not punishable with death committed after two previous-convictions for felony. It had been thought desirable to somewhat limit that. Otherwise a person might be exposed to whipping who had comnitted two very small offences. It had been thought desirable to limit that and state that the two convictions must have been serious ones for which he had undergone six months' imprisonment. He therefore moved the addition the words "Provided that the offendershall have suffered on each of the said convictions six months' imprisonment at least."

THE THEATRE-RCYAL.

Last night at the Theatre Royal the above Club gave their third performance of the season when they produced "A Comical Countess," by William Brough, and H. J. Byron's comedy "Old Soldiers." The house was crowded, every available seat being occupied. His Excellency Major-General Cameron and the Misses Cameran were among those present. "A Comical Countess" is a very bright an pretty comediatta, rather superior to the usua order of "curtain raisers." The scene of the piece is laid in France. A public eveniur fête a practical joke in putting out the light while the merry making was at its height. In the confusion which follows, the Chevalier de Vilbrac. in making his way out of the gardens, hus the miswhom he believes to have been the reigning favourite, Madame Pompadour. Fearful of the consequences of his act, he disguises himself as his own lacquey, and in this character obtains a situation in the house of the Countess de l'Espalier. The Countess is no other than the waiting maid of the mother of the Chevalier with whom he had been violently in love during his younger-days, but of whom he has since lost of the creditors for $100 borrowed on a promissight. His acting during the latfirst act, which was stiff and unnatural in a very marked degree. The Cassidy of Mr. Wallace was one of the few good bits of acting of the piece. His rendering of the good-hearted Irish pathetic parts he was perhaps scarcely so successful as in the lighter ones, but on the whole the delineation of the character was a finished piece of acting. He soon gained the sympathy of the house, and his sallies evoked frequent and hearty applause. Capt. Bunbury, as Capt McTavish, had heavily handicapped himself with a most unpensation for diseased cattle destroyed, there is suitable make up. This was the more to be always a risk of more or less heavy demands be- regretted as it somewhat marred what was othering made on the Colonial Treasury on this wise a perfect performance. As Gordon Lockhart, Major Steevens had not very much as to enable them to hold 360 head, would involve to do, but this he did so well that it an outlay of $9,600, and if this proposition were was a pity that a more important character sanctioned a special vote for this amount would had not been assigned to him. Mr. Whittall was satisfactory as Major Fang in every point lance has remained over of $1,840 from last year's except that of appearance. It could not be said vote of $10,000, so that if a special vote of that he looked the part, and it would have been 89,600 were now asked for, a proportion of better if he had been made up to look a little less youthful. The part of Kate McTavish is one that requires rather an experienced actress, and Miss Brereton, being a novice, could not do justice to the part. In some of her lighter scopes she was, perhaps, a little more successful, but it is not too much to say that in the sympathetic parts she failed entirely. As the coquette Mary Moss, Miss Croisdale was scarcely more successful, her manner being hardly piquant and lively enough for this character, but Miss Croisdals enunciated her words clearly, and Honourable F. Stewart, LLD., Acting had evidently studied her part. Mrs. Whittall's Mrs. Major Moss was not quite so happy an effort as her Countess in the THE AMATEUR DRAMATIC CLUB AT preceding piece, although she worked hard. The lighter comedy of the first character was evidently more suited to her. Still, she may be fairly said to have carried away the palm as far as the ladies were conc. rned. On the whole the performance was scarcely equal to former representations of the Club. It is only justice, however, to say that the actors were word perfect, and much praise is due to Capt. Bunbury for the excellent manner in which the arrangements behind the curtain were carried out. The scenery was also good, both pieces being well staged.

The Band of the Northamptonshire Regiment was present and played an overture and some pleasing selections between the acts.
